Indian Summer.

Whether we are now enjoying our Indian Summer period—that brief season of "gold and silver"—gold at noonday and silver at eventide—or whether we may expect it still later on has been a matter of doubt with some persons because of its early appearance this year. We think the argument is with those who say that heavy frosts having occurred already, the Indian Summer follows as a matter of course. But be this as it may, there can be no two opinions as to the fact that the days and nights of this present time are simply incomparable. They are indeed "the halcyon days of the year," which go far to make amends for all the caprices of our changeable climate. To the other seasons of the year they are what STREY SMITH said strawberries were to other fruits. "Doubtless," said he, "the Almighty might have made a more delicious fruit, than the strawberry, but he never did." And so we said yesterday, walking along in the country, doubtless the Almighty might have made a more enchanting season than these superb and thrilling days, in which we have "the glow of Summer without its glare," but surely he never did. Even in the city they fill everybody with the electricity of their presence, but it is only in the country that they are to be enjoyed to the full. Only from the tops of the hills that begirt us, or the table lands that lie back of them, can we breathe in the pure atmosphere that has been tempered agreeably to every sense by the warm days and cool nights of this farewell season. An Indian Summer Sunday in the country, within sound of the church going bells of the city, whose tones rise and fall upon the air now "faint and far" now "this and clear," like "the horns of Eiland faintly blowing," is a day of discipline to all the grosser feelings of human nature, like that 5th day of the Moon on which the Pagan ascended the hills of Babel and listening to the music of the gen saw the visions of Mirza that taught him the vanity of human life.

We possess these days only as a fast fleeting treasure. They were with us yesterday, but they may be gone to-day or to-morrow. Their time will soon be up. And then comes the days that are "cold and dark and dreary," when

"Tis rains and the wind is never weary," and that makes such a forbidding contrast to these glorious days of Indian Summer. As long however as the present mellow sunshine falls upon the city streets or pours its dreamy splendor over the valleys and hills of the country let everybody enjoy them to the full.

THE ANNOUING PENNSYLVANIA DISTRICT.—There is a decided public interest in the result of the Congressional contest now going on in the Washington, Pa., Congressional District. The Pittsburgh Evening Telegraph (Republican) sent a reporter over to Washington to interview various parties as to the prospective result. He reports that there is a "defection" in the Republican ranks against the "Ring" nominee (WALLACE) that will probably result in electing MILLER, the Democratic nominee. Here is his report of an interview with one Republican:

Correspondent.—You have been taking an active part in the politics in this country, have you not?

Politician.—Yes, sir, and have always submitted to everything the "Ring" saw fit to impose on us.

Correspondent.—Are you one of the dissatisfied politicians over the nomination of Wallace?

Politician.—Yes, sir, and I have openly declared my position. A great many prominent Republican leaders say nothing, but they will not support Wallace. This is privately known to all of us. The leading Republicans of the townships will vote solid against Wallace.

Correspondent.—Do you suppose it possible for the opposition to die out before the election?

Politician.—What positive assurance have you that the "fix" will not be accomplished?

Politician.—Two very good reasons: 1st. Because Mr. Moore is immensely popular with the Republicans, and they feel deeply grieved at his contemptible snubbing and

2nd. Because they have determined to break down the dominating spirit of the Ring, so palpably manifested in the nominations. They are determined on this, even though it may sacrifice a Republican Congressman. The breach in the Republican ranks is worse now than it was ten days ago. The people are beginning to see the thing as it exists, and Wallace's appearance here is characterized as a piece of audacity and he has hurt his chances considerably. Coercion with the Republicans of this country is at an end, and the shackles that bound them to the party have been thrown off. Fears are expressed that the election will endanger our country's future, but if the Republicans stay at home and allow the ticket to fall, they are responsible. It is useless to undertake to heal the difficulty, because the people reason that now is the time to strike down the "Ring." They will be driven like sheep to the shambles no longer.

It is, as we remarked the other day, a wholesome sign of the times to see voters bolting a "Ring" nominee, be he Republican or Democrat. Organs like the Fairmont Index may proclaim "death to bolters," but intimations of that sort no longer scare the people as they once did. The independent press of the country is rapidly educating the voters of both parties to "bolt" whenever by fraud or trick the popular will is defeated in nominations. The great bolt of the Democratic party in this State in 1872 was the most wholesome lesson ever administered in West Virginia politics. It will do good for many years to come. A lesson of the same sort among the Republicans of the Washington, Pa., District seems just now to be needed quite as badly.

There is some anxiety in England over the decrease in the number of persons devoted to agriculture. In a population of 23,711,207 in 1871, there were but 1,830,000 male and female agricultural laborers, against 2,064,153 in 1851. The decrease in the ten years between 1851 and 1871 was 189,351.

How Mr. Faulkner "Straddled" the Second District in the Late Campaign.

A correspondent writing to us from one of the counties of the Second District makes the following observations as to the way things worked together for the good of that veteran and venerable saint, the ex-Minister to St. Cloud:

Mr. Faulkner, in his speeches, strongly intimated that Mr. Boteler was in reality the candidate of the Republicans, and that those who supported him were affiliating with the Republicans.

In this county we have very few Republicans except the negroes. From the assertions of the Faulknerites, the Botelerites supposed the negro vote would fall on their side as naturally as a ripe apple falls to the earth. But the negroes having got hold of Mr. Faulkner's abolition speech of 1873, which has been reprinted since the abolition of slavery, and which Mr. Lincoln kept by him and used on the stump in Illinois, and could repeat considerable portions from memory; and also Mr. Faulkner's oath taken in 1866, without mental reservation or purpose of evasion, concluded that Mr. Faulkner was the simon-pure Radical Republican candidate, and supported him almost to a man. In the Court House precinct of this county Mr. Faulkner's majority was 64. At least 75 negroes voted for him, thus showing that Boteler got a majority of the Democratic votes in this precinct, as he did throughout the county.

The vote should be stated thus: For Mr. Faulkner "whose shrewd observation and judgment detected the seeds of disorganization and failure as soon as he entered the Confederacy," and who took a solemn oath, "without mental reservation or purpose of evasion," that since the 30th of June, 1863, he gave no aid or comfort by counseling, consulting, or encouraging the Confederacy, or acknowledging its constitution—80 votes.

For the Mr. Faulkner who swore to support the constitution and remain faithful to the Confederacy until the surrender—813 votes.

CHURCH.—The appended recipe is said to be a certain cure for this dire scourge of children. Cut it out and keep for use: Crop can be cured in one minute, and the remedy is simply alum and sugar. The way to accomplish the deed is to take a half tumbler, and shake in small particles about a teaspoonful of alum; then mix it with twice its quantity of sugar to make it palatable, and administer it as quickly as possible. Almost instantaneous relief will follow.
